➔ I'm okay ... 5.8 earthquake rocks L.A. area

Earthquake in LA ...

When the earthquake hit, I was at work (in Inglewood) ... at the old, old motel (also known as Walden House residential drug treatment facility, 80 beds !!). My second floor office (i.e. converted motel room) - SHOOK for a good 30 seconds. This building is not earthquake retrofitted ... No damage from earthquake though (other than the existing structure already falling a part).

The men did real well ... evacuated the building to the parking lot in two minutes, which is excellent timing. A lot of the men have never experienced an earthquake (or they were in prison or high on drugs when an earthquake hit - so they are talking non-stop right now about it).

Being from San Francisco, and experiencing many earthquakers - 'quakes have never affected me much. Breathe in and out - ... Out of my control, so no need to panic. It it what it is ...

All remains well in Los Angeles

My First Major Earthquake!!

Ooh, how exciting!! it was a 5.4, but i didn't think it was that bad. My bro and me were watching TV(fortunately, the news) and there was a shaking/rolling. And we went to the doorway and stood there, and then after like 10 seconds, it was over. Then my mom and dad called, and my grandma got home from the market. Interestingly, my grandma didn't feel it at all! When she got home, we were like "Hey, are you okay, did you feel the earthquake?" And she was like "What earthquake?" So that was weird. Here's all the news I've gotten on it so far: It was originally thought to be a 5.8, but later changed to be 5.4. There have been 27 aftershocks, the highest have been around 3.7. The epicenter of the earthquake was a few miles near Chino Hills. No major injuries or deaths reported. Only damage seems to be broken glass and a few things that fell off shelves. So nothing major.

And BTW, that was not the really big earthquake that we've been expecting, it was only a medium one, so don't be too relieved, because there's still another, bigger one coming. But actually, I like earthquakes, they're really exciting. :]

Earthquake i

so i survived another earthquake

Jul. 29th, 2008 at 12:47 PM

wheree, earthquake! it's only the second larger quake i felt clearly since moving to california. it was like 2 rolling waves out here at the beach, then some shaking. things ratteling in my cupboard, windchimes going crazy, the building shaking, wood creaking. kind of like a bowl of jello that's being moved - interesting. this one was felt from san diego to l.a. to las vegas, which seems rather unusual for the relatively low magnitude of 5.8. the last one i felt was almost 7.0 with an epicenter in mojave but that was years ago and a real jolt that was actually scary.

Latest details:

- 5.8 quake strikes near Chino Hills, Calif.
- No initial reports of damage to highways or roads
- Disneyland reports all rides being evacuated
- Shake map: www.data.scec.org/recenteqs.html
